BUFFALO BILL'S WILD WEST. It Will Exhibit in This City Two Days Next Month.

Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, the same entertainment that was at the world's fair, will exhibit in this city May 8 and 9, on the old show grounds on West Washington

Horses and horsemen by the hundreds form the most material part of the show, which will soon be seen here. At the head of them is the dashing cavalier of the fron-tier, Col. W. F. Cody, or, as he is every-where known, "Buffalo Bill." While the re-productions of wild life in the West, with its Indians, scouts, hunters and frontiers-men, will maintain its perennial attractiveness, to very many the evolutions and exhibitions of skill, courage and proficiency of the various horsemen who form the congress of rough riders of the world will be specially interesting and exciting. To a rider the equitation of the North American Inclans will be both interesting and surprising. Next to the Indians in approximate primitive simplicity of outfit for riding are the Gauchos, from the Argentine tepublic, representatives of a race of mixed panish and Indian extraction, who are all herders of horses, cattle and sheep.

He employs no steel-bitted bridles, but a sort of leather halter with a very solid bit of raw-hide. As all riders know, it is often not easy to get a horse to take in his mouth cold and hard metal bit. Some animals have an intense aversion for it and will fight against it. But the Gaucho has a and the horse once having tasted it is never again unwilling to receive it. The Gauchos are believed to be the best horse-breakers in the world, because they have more patience than any others and give more sym-pathetic study to the individual disposition of each animal they take in hand.

GREAT LOVE FEAST

GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATES A AT THE TRAVELERS' CLUB.

Short Speeches by the Prominent Men Who Seek Republican State Honors.

A rock-ribbed Democrat would have been ill at ease at the meeting of the Commercial was no place for one, for the enthusiasm of the affair foretold but one result in the coming elections, and that is Republican success, The travelers, who get out among the people, can feel the wave of victory coming, and their meetings are now more enthusiastic than ever before. It was candidates' night at the club, and those who seek nominations at the hands of the Republican party responded readily to the invitation of the club.

The clubrooms, over Pearson's music hall, were crowded to the doors. During the early part of the evening it was impossible for all to procure seats, and the candidates for county nominations had an "overflow meeting" in the entrance halls. The State candidates are legion, and they formed a considerable part of the audience in the front part of the hall. All in all, eighteen speeches were made. The candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Appellate judgeships were represented. The speeches were not of the ordinary brand, for, with so many on the programme, it would have been impossible for any one to have discussed the issues of the day in an exhaustive manner. They were short and pointed talks, by which the different candidates introduced themselves to the members of the club and their friends. The speeches all rang with the sound principles of the Republican party, which were propounded amid pleasantries and stories.

Vice President T. P. Swain presided at the meeting. A well-known and popular quartet, composed of colored men, furnished enjoyable music, which was greeted with applause. The speakers were all welcomed with demonstrations, indicating that each had friends in the crowd. It was a candidates love feast, and the host of feeling existed one candidate. and the best of feeling existed, one candidate passing some little pleasantry on another, to be met by a sharp reply. The temperature of the room was rather warm, but the condi-tions were somewhat remedied by lemonade, which the members of the club passed through the audience.

will make no serious mistake in nominating any one of those present, and those there were said to be a sample of the ma-terial not in attendance. The speakers all declared themselves in favor of an honest tariff which shall protect American in-dustry and labor against the cheap productions of Europe. As they spoke to a gathering of men naturally interested in trade and commercial matters, the candidates all referred to the tariff question, which shall bring back again the days of prosperity. The candidates all spoke soundly on the money question, and each appeared, as the sporting editor would say, in his very best

GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATES Those candidates for Governor who spoke were: F. B. Posey, of Evansville; J. T. Johnston, of Parke county; Warren G. Sayre, of Wabash; Theodore P. Shockney, of Union City; Will Cumback, of Greensburg, and John L. Griffiths, of Indianapolis. State Senator Haggard, of Lafayette, and J. W. Baker, of Columbia City, candidates for Lieutenant Governor, made brief

The candidates for nominations to the Appellate Bench were represented by Judge Stephenson, of Noblesville; Judge Wiley, of Fowler; Judge Comstock, of Richmond; Capt. D. E. Beem, of Owen county; Judge Bundy, of New Castle; Judge Black, of Indianapolis, and Judge Friedley, of Rising Sun. Attorney-general Ketcham and State Treasurer Scholz, both candidates for renomination were heard mination, were heard. Mr. Swain, in opening the meeting, re-ferred to the great results to be obtained by the coming election, and how a new na-tional administration is demanded by all commercial interests. He welcomed candidates as visitors to the club, and concluded by introducing Congressman Over-street as the first speaker of the evening. Those who had never heard Congressman Overstreet were convinced by the earnest manner in which he spoke that the Republicans of this district had made no mistake n renominating him as a candidate for Congress. He has a businesslike way of talk-ing that pleased the members of the club, and he showed that he is a man in whom there is much energy and enthusiasm. Mr. Overstreet spoke of the two great things which the party has to do-to establish a tariff which shall protect and furnish sufficlent revenue to run the government and give the business interests of the country the assurance that the administration shall be run on a business basis, and that a sound and healthy monetary system shall be main-

Ex-Governor Cumback was the first of the gubernatorial candidates to speak. His remarks were brief. He complimented the commercial travelers and referred to the great business depression which the Republican party is pledged to remedy. Mr. Posey followed, and being a stranger to the club, he was listened to with the closest attention. The impression he made was favorable. He, too, spoke of the depression, saying the la-boring man had to toil and work from morn-ing until night under the present condition in order to make sufficient to keep the wolf from the door. With the return of the Relause. Mr. Posey added that he took Gen. Harrison at his word when he said he was not a candidate, and McKinley was mentioned as a favorite.

J. T. Johnston, the third speaker, is a large man with a stock of hard sense and good humor as big as himself. He said the commercial travelers did not have to be remind-ed of what Democracy had done, they could observe in their business the disastrous consequence. He saw in the meeting and in the enthusiasm everywhere a great Republi-can victory, which means confidence and better times. It must not be forgotten that Mr. Johnston is a story teller, and he gave his hearers the benefit of several choice sections from his large collection. NO MATTER THE NOMINEE. Warren G. Sayre in opening his remarks. was facetious. He referred to the gathering of the candidates as a menagerie, each animal to be trotted out for inspection. Then Mr. Sayre took up the text of all Republicans, by speaking of the frightful results of Democratic mismanagement. He said it did not matter whether McKinley, Reed, Harrison or Allison were nominated, the country would be safe, for the nominee is sure to be a Republican who will stand on good Re-Theodore P. Shockney made what is known as a rattling speech, it being full of material and delivered in a manner bound to attract attention. He, too, referred to the national candidates as good Republicans, and mention was made of the failure which the Demperatic party has always made of trying to When Mr. Griffiths was introduced there appeared the most enthusiasm of the evening, but Mr. Griffiths was in his home city. He very graciously acknowledged the greeting given him and said he wished to welcome all the candidates here. He hoped they would have a love feast in each of their homes. Mr. Griffiths's remarks were very much to the point and not one word was amiss. He briefly recited the failure the Democratic party has made every time it experiments with a revised tariff. Mr. Griffiths made mention of that stalwart old Republican and statesman, "Uncle Dick" Thompson, and the name was sufficient as a signal for an outburst of applause. The speaker said he had listened to Mr. Thompson a few days ago and heard him say:

and heard him say:

"I have not many more years to live. I do not know that I shall see another election, but I cannot rest easily in my grave if, dying, I know that a Democratic President is in power and the country is to be run with a tariff for revenue only."

Messrs. Haggard and Baker spoke briefly. While the former was speaking there was considerable confusion in the rear ante-room, and William L. Taylor arose as a member of the club to ask that the noise cease.

"Where is Sheriff Womack?" asked Chairman Swain.

"He will preserve order," some one cried.
Judge Stephenson, of Noblesville, made of the happiest talks of the evening He said that Coleridge once said that the Tory party of England was so conservative that it did not take kindly to the new moon. He said it was much the same with the Democratic party. The latter has never known anything but a deficit, so as soon as power was gained in 1894 the leaders pre-pared to get one. He said the Democratic party did not know what a surplus was made good talks, but as they were limited on time they could not dwell extensively with great questions. The meeting was rightly termed a love feast, and the candidates departed much better acquainted with each other and with the members of the club, while the datter feel that they are the friends of a goodly aggregation of candidates.

ROUND-UP OF STATE CANDIDATES.

They Are Cultivating Each Other's Friends for "Second Choices." There was a grand round-up of Republican candidates for State nominations at the Denison last evening. The traveling men had invited them all to their reception, and their invitations are usually accepted. Among Travelers' Republican Club last evening. It | them were Frank B. Posey, Will Cumback, Charles T. Doxey, John L. Griffiths, James T. Johnston, Charles F. Griffin, Warren G. Sayre and Theodore Shockney, candidates for Governor; W. S. Hagard and John W. Baker, for Lieutenant Governor; Charles F. Remy, W. H. Ripley and John Heinrichs, for Reporter of the Supreme Court, and Judges Wiley, Comstock, Bundy, Friedley, Black and Stephenson, all of whom have confidence in the idea that the Lieutenant in the idea that the lieutenant in the idea that the idea t in the idea that the Legislature will extend the life of the Appellate Court, and would like to add dignity to its bench.

The advantage of having a large field of candidates is being beautifully exemplified in this ante-convention campaign. While it is generally admitted that three or four of the candidates will come into the convention with more general strength than the others, nobody has anything like support enough to give him a sure thing. Therefore, each one is anxious to be the second choice of the friends of the others, and is careful to keep on friendly terms with them. Furthermor the fact that there are so many in the field makes the outcome so uncertain that no one of them has his hopes raised to a very high pitch, and, therefore, there is not likely to be very much disappointment among those who are defeated.

Haughville Town Committee. The Republicans of Haughville last night selected their campaign committee for the town election. Thomas Powderly was chosen committeeman by the First district, H. C. Tomlinson by the second and Bedford Monecal by the third. These three afterwards elected Mr. Monecal chairman of the committee, Mr. Slattery secretary and J. E. Harbison treasurer. These latter three will also constitute the finance committee.

Political Notes. Carey L. Smith will address the North-eastern Republican Club in Bellefontaine Hall next Thursday evening. The Republicans of Wayne township will hold a meeting at Haughville Monday night. There will be plenty of music and oratory. The First Voters' Republican Club of the Second ward was organized last night at the tried by jury. rooms of the North-side Republican Club, resident; Cale E. Hill, first vice president George Q. Bruce, second vice president; Albert B. Cole, secretary; W. H. Archdeacon, treasurer; executive committee, F. L. Matlock, Harry C. Hendrickson, G. E. Richard-

THE CHILDREN STOLEN

TWO LITTLE WILSON GIRLS MYS-TERIOUSLY DISAPPEAR.

Nickelodian Woman Has Them-"Monk" Wilson Detained in Connection with the Case.

Joseph Wilson, fifteen years old, and his two sisters, Arizona and Rosa, the wandering circus prformers who came here Thursday, hoping to pick up money to send to their mother and father at Danville, Ill., fell among wolves when they found an engagement at the Nickelodian Theater. Mamie Quinette, an old circus performer, had an engagement at the theater last week. Some time ago she played a week at the Buckingham Theater, in Louisville, while the Wilson family was there. Quinette came here expecting to get an engagement with L. B. Lent's circus, which is about to begin the season. Formerly she bad been acquainted with Henry H. Osborn, part owner and lec-turer at the Nickelodian. Upon hearing that the Wilson children were here without their parents, it occurred to Quinette and Csborn that they would be a good card, and they were found and taken to the theater. Joseph Wilson remembered Quinette, and, regarding her as friendly to himself and little sisters. he agreed to play two weeks for $20 a week. This, he thought, would enable him to "stake" his father and mother. Thursday night the children did a turn and proved quite an attraction, 5 Quinette, after the performance, went to Mrs. Butterworth and informed her that she (Quinette) intended to look after the Wilson children, and asked her to care for them during the night, promising to pay her for the trouble. Mrs. Butterworth has three children of her own who have been performing at the Nickelodian. Her house is small, and she had but little room. Feeling an interest in the plucky efforts of the children to help their sick father, Mrs. Butterworth decided to look after them for one night. Vesterday morning Quinette came night. Yesterday morning Quinette came and took them away, saying that she would have them at the Nickelodian in time to do their afternoon turn. That was the last that was seen of either the woman or the two

Joe, their brother, in the meantime waited about the theater for them. Through the publican party shall come better times. He referred to General Harrison as the leading Republican of the country, and immediately friend, he says that he did not give the matployes warned him of the plot that was progressing. Mrs. Butterworth says that Quinette was heard to say that the two girls were not Joe's sisters and that Mr. and Irs. Wilson were not their parents. "I have fust as good a right to them as that woman," she said, "and I mean to have them." As his sisters had not been heard from at 7 o'clock, Joe determined to appeal to the police. He saw Captain Quigley shortly after roll call and complained that Quinette had "swiped" his sisters.

POLICE WATCHING THE PLACE. The police have kept a close eye upon the Nickelodian ever since it was opened to the public seven weeks ago. "Monk" Wilson, Ben Irwin and Henry H. Osborn and a man named Terry were the original promoters of the enterprise. Wilson formerly owned a saloon on Virginia avenue, but was compelled to sell out, as the place was kept under close surveillance for some time. Wilson was suspected of harboring thieves. Osborn and Irwin are well-known to the police. Osborn has been a side-show circus fakir for years. When the lad told his story Captain Quigley at once suspected that "Monk" Wilson, Ben Irwin and Henry H. Osborn were the instigators of a kidnapping case. Sergeants Schwab and Laporte went to the Nickelodian and made some inquiries, but received no satisfactory explanation in answer to their questions, and took the three men to the station house. "Monk" Wilson and Ben Irwin both protested that they had and Ben Irwin both protested that they had no knowledge of what was being done and convinced the Captain that they were telling the truth. From what he learned, the Captain concluded that the plot had been hatched in the brain of Quinette and Osborn. The latter was locked up on the charge of kidnaping. Wilson said that Quinette had probably taken the children to West Indianapolis, where she has been stopping. He and Os-born thought that they could locate the woman and children, and were given until midnight to produce them, the Captain giv-ing them to understand that if they did not do so they would be held responsible. Wil-son has been in hard lines lately and seemed son has been in hard lines lately and seemed sincere in his statements that he knew pothing about the plans that had been laid by Osborn and Quinette. In his earnestness he actually cried and almost went upon his knees in protesting his innocence.

Irwin has no further interest in the Nickelodian, as he and Terry sold their half interest in the theater to C. J. Arnold last week. Osborn and Wilson have since tried to induce him to purchase their interests. Arnold is confident that Osborn is deeply mixed up in the kidnaping affair, as the latter told him yesterday afternoon, when the children did not appear, that Quinette had taken them away, intending to adopt them. "I told him," said Mr. Arnold last night, "that she could not adopt them while their brother was here. He replied that the boy was not their brother, and that she could get possession of the girls under the vagrancy law." Mr. Arnold has done everything he could to help Captain Quigley find the girls. At 1 o'clock this morning "Monk" Wilson and Ben Irwin had not returned from their quest for the woman Quinette and the two est some one should telegraph his mother, no, he says, has no money to jump over ere and look after them. He sent her Sesterday, part of the money given him and is sisters for performing at a masked ball

TO THE AGED KINGSLEYS.

An Outrage that the Suit Was Brought -The Barber Terrors Get Light Sentences.

Judge Harvey, of the Superior Court, yesterday refused to grant a divorce in the suit of Adriel Kingsley against Roxey Kingsley. At the same time the court took occasion to denounce the conduct of attorneys who bring suits of this character. The Kingsleys are old people, and, until their separation some time ago, had lived together since 1840. The plaintiff is seventyseven and the defendant seventy-four. They live on West Washington street, where they were engaged in the dairy business for a long time. Kingsley accused his wife of abandonment, and charged that she had associated with men and women of notorious character. The plaintiff sought to show that his wife had been intimately acquainted with James Eubanks, who was shot and killed by Patrick O'Keefe while the latter was defending the honor of his home. None of these charges could be sustained, and Judge Harvey declared that he would not grant a divorce. One of the witnesses testi-fled that he thought Kingsley was insane. In his comments the court scored attorney Perrin, who brought the suit.

"It is an outrage," he said, "that the private affairs of these people, who have lived together for forty years, should be dragged into court. The attorneys who brought this suit are to blame, and hereafter if they or any other lawyers bring an action in this court without first knowing what their witnesses can testify to they will be punished for contempt of court."

WILLING TO TAKE NINE YEARS. Claude St. Clair Wanted to Plead

Guilty in Criminal Court. Claude St. Clair, who attempted to rob H. S. Garner at Burford's printing establishment, was arraigned in the Criminal Court yesterday and agreed to plead guilty if the court would give him a moderate sentence. He intimated that nine years would be satisfactory. Judge McCray declined to make any promises. The prisoner then concluded he would stand trial and asked that he be

The Gong Frightened His Horse. In a suit for damages brought in the Superior Court yesterday, Emanuel G. Huff, of Haughville, demands $10,000 of the Citizens' Street-railroad Company for injuries which he received during the month of February last in a collision with one of the company's motor-cars. The plaintiff says he was driving leisurely homeward about 6 o'clock in the evening when he met a car on West Michigan street. There was plenty of space, he says, for him to pass, and had not the motorman violent. Sounded the bell there would have been no accident. The sounding of the gong, however, frightened his horse, and the animal, in attempting to turn about, threw the vehicle in front of the car. The plaintiff was thrown and injured and his buggy demolished

Out of the Coatesville Wreck. William S. and Cornelius Sherwood, who were passengers on the Vandalia train which went off the track at Coatesville Jan. 28, 1895, have sued the T. H. & I. railway for $10,000 each. The plaintiffs were commercial travelers, in the employ of a New York manufacturing concern. Both were injured in the wreck and allege that they were compelled to return home on account of these injuries and were put to great expense and inconvenience. The company is charged with negligence in falling to maintain a proper switch at the point where the accident happened.

ministrator, with the will annexed, of the estate of Elizabeth Schaaf. Holmes Had a $6,000 Offer. Attorney A. W. Bullock has among the letters written him by the confessed murderer Holmes one in which the latter spoke of having had an offer of $6,000 from a New York paper for his confession. Holmes feared that this offer was "having some influence in holding back all the Western men." He also spoke of having "a party who would give a considerable amount for the facts as they exist." This letter was written in January, while Holmes was daily protesting his innocence of the crimes charged to him, and with the assistance of attorney Bullock and detec-tive Corbett was apparently doing his best to prove that he had no connection with these Chattel Mortgage Cases. Yesterday Henry W. Bullock, attorney for Mrs. Shaburt, brought a suit in Justice Clark's court against D. R. McNaught, proprietor of the Security Mortgage Loan Company, to recover $25, the legal penalty for failure to satisfy a chattel mortgage, which has been fully paid. Last October Mrs. Shaburt borrowed $30 from McNaught. She alleges that she has repaid $35. A suit to replevin the goods was brought by McNaught in Justice Hay's court, but was dismissed Friday, when Henry W. Bullock, Mrs. Shaburt's attorney, asked for a jury trial. It was immediately refiled.
